Breakfast...A Time to Contemplate

Breakfast at Grace Place is a quiet time...a time to prepare for the day. We love the smell of hot coffee brewing as we make preparations for the activities that follow breakfast.

We have individualized clipboards for each member. Some members prefer to work a crossword or a word search. Still others like adult coloring or reading a morning inspirational. Some like their smartphone. And some just look at beautiful scenic videos on the big screen television that is hooked up to the internet as they drink their beverage.

We love to find a good music (usually oldies but goodies) to listen to as we slowly wake up each morning. Not every member who comes in the morning eats with us, but we always encourage the consumption of liquids and make sure each member has bottled water in front of them as soon as they come in and throughout the day. We love our members and know that it is good for all of us to drink enough water.

Come Join Us For Breakfast!

Our Food Fare comes from local restaurants!

Not Just a Dinner Party....Did You Know...?

In addition to our regular Dinner Party routine, we have a new routine that begins at noon. Instead of just playing pretty music and displaying beautiful scenery on our big screen television, we are pretending to travel to different parts of the world as we dine. It all started when one of our members requested a video tour of Paris, her favorite city, while we were eating. From there we traveled to Barcelona, Rome, Venice, Tokyo, and many other destinations...one place each day. We are also learning words in a new language as we 'travel'.

Dr. Schraberg gave a lecture recently and mentioned how research has shown that traveling and learning a new language is a good way to deter or delay dementia by challenging the brain in so many ways.

Come join us as a member or volunteer and help your brain!

Self-Improvement: Alone Time vs. Loneliness: What's a Good Balance?

Alone Time vs. Loneliness: What's a Good Balance?

Written by Kathleen Doheny Being Alone and Loneliness

Time spent alone and loneliness are two different phenomena. Mehl and his colleagues found a "robust but small" link between loneliness and time spent alone. They analyzed data from 426 people, ages 24 to 90, who wore a smartphone app that recorded social activity in everyday life. The app records, with the people's permission, the sounds they make for 30 seconds every 12 minutes. The app helped the researchers analyze time spent alone vs. time interacting with others. Each person also completed a validated measure of loneliness.

Overall, the people in the study spent 66% of their time alone. But there was a wide variation on time spent alone, which surprised Alex F. Danvers, PhD, the study's co-lead author. Some spent 90% of their time alone, some 10%, older single adults were most likely to spend time alone.

While the relationship is not linear, and varies by age and other things, solitary time does not closely correlate with loneliness until a person spends 75% of their time alone, the researchers found.

But for older adults, loneliness set in when they spent much less time alone than 75%.

"For those 65 and older, there is a clear, a very strong association [between alone time and loneliness]," Mehl said

While the research is ongoing, Danvers concluded that "as long as you aren't spending a huge portion of your day alone, even just having a few hours [of interaction] is probably enough if you want to avoid being lonely."

Solitude and Socializing

There's no evidence for a one-size-fitsall optimal balance between solitude and social time. Solitude time can both benefit and harm well-being, Nguyen said in an interview. "Brief solitude can downregulate strong emotions and promote rest and relaxation," she said. But it can also backfire. For instance, when people are alone and experiencing negative emotions, "I would think they would want to get out of that state," she said. But they found that some wanted to continue in that state. And that might eventually lead to too much negative thinking and rumination, and increase the odds of loneliness, she said.

She concluded that "the balance is less about the amount of time than about how you spend it." Activities such as gardening, walking, and reading may inspire people to see time alone as a way to gain rest and relaxation.

Bee Weller's Buzz on Health: Unexpected Heart Attack Triggers

Lack of Sleep

You'll feel grumpy and tired if you don't get enough sleep on a regular basis, but it can raise your risk of a heart attack, too. In one study, researchers found that people who usually slept fewer than 6 hours a night were twice as likely to have a heart attack as those who slept 6 to 8. Doctors aren't sure exactly why this is, but they do know that losing sleep can raise your blood pressure and lead to inflammation. Neither of those is good for your heart.

Migraine Headaches

People who get these are more likely to have a heart attack later in life than those who don't. And ones that include auras -- strange sights, sounds, or feelings that start before the headache hits -- seem to have a stronger link to heart problems.

Cold Weather

It's a shock to the system. Being outside in the winter months can cause your arteries to narrow, making it harder for blood to reach your heart. On top of that, your heart has to work harder to keep your body warm.

Air Pollution and Car Exhaust

Heart attacks are more common when air pollution levels are high. People who breathe dirty air on a regular basis are more likely to have clogged arteries and heart disease. Sitting in traffic may be especially dangerous, because it can combine car fumes with anger or frustration.

A Big, Heavy Meal

Think twice before going back for seconds or thirds -- it may hurt more than your waistline. When you eat large amounts of food in one sitting, it leads to higher levels of the stress hormone norepinephrine in your body. That can raise your blood pressure and heart rate, and it may trigger heart attacks in some people. Very fatty meals can also cause a sudden jump in a kind of fat in your blood, and that may temporarily damage some blood vessels as well.

A Cold or the Flu

When your immune system fights off a bug, it can cause inflammation that can damage your heart and arteries. In one study, people with respiratory infections were twice as likely to have a heart attack. But their risk level went back to normal after they'd been clear of the infection a few weeks. Heart attack rates are also higher during flu outbreaks

Asthma

Your chances of having a heart attack go up about 70% if you have this lung disease. Even if you use an inhaler to keep it under control, your risk is still higher than normal. Because of your asthma, you also may tend to ignore chest tightness, which can be an early sign of a heart attack. Doctors don't know if breathing problems trigger heart attacks or if they simply have a common cause: inflammation.

Alcohol

A drink a day seems to help protect your heart against disease, but heavy drinking may do just the opposite. Over time, that can raise your blood pressure, increase certain kinds of bad cholesterol, and lead to weight gain -- all of which can hurt your heart. There also can be short-term consequences: A single night of binge drinking can raise your risk of heart attack over the next week, according to one study

Coffee

Just like alcohol, coffee has its pluses and minuses. Caffeine makes your blood pressure go up for a short time, and that can trigger an attack, especially if you don't drink it regularly or are at risk for other reasons. Overall, though, drinking one to two cups a day does not seem to be harmful.
